Witnesses Swear the Ex-Boss President Cried When He Presented the Token to the Bandmaster.

The suit of Chris Von der Abe against Randmaster William Well for $50, the price of a medal which Von der Ahe claims he presented to Well at the latter's request in 1896, when Well's band was playing at Sportsman's Park, was tried in Justice Cullinane's court yesterday and was marked by many dramatic and amusing incidents. A dramatle part came in when Weil's law yer, Emanuel Well, a brother of the defendant, attacked Muckenfuss's veracity. Mr. Muckenfuss expressed an intention of becoming beiligerent if the attack was repeated, and the cloud passed over.

Mr. Von der Ahe was the first witness. He testified that Weil and he had several conversations on the medal presentation proposal; that Weil said that it would be a good thing for him, and would help him in his business, and that it was decided that the presentation take place at the opening of the Von der Ahe-Reinicke Grocery Company, which occurred in June, 1895. He was going to present some other souvenirs, and included the medal. The job lot cost $200. The medal, he said, cost something more than $50. The bill was not paid, he said, until January, 1896. He said he asked Weil about the matter, after the presentation, and Weil said that he was hard up and had to pay his men, and the matter was allowed

Miss Primm is well known in both De Soto and St. Louis, where she is a favorite in music circles, being a vocalist of excellent attainments. She is a member of the old and well-known Primm family, who Chris admitted that he had paid Well for music furnished after the presentation and had not kept the price of the medal out at any time.

Mr. Muckenfuss, the next witness, stated that he was secretary for Von der Ahe at the time of the presentation. He said that Yon der Ahe called him into the office some time before the medal was presented and the second of the wealthiest and best-known men in the State. The lists of presents were very large, and many of them very valuable.
